The Rendition of Vallandingham. The correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, who accompanied the Vallandigham escurt

This was true in a deeper sense than be intended it, for the offence against the union for which he was about to be punished, was much worse than the infamous attempt of Buchman to fasten neuro slavey upon the outraged inhabitants of Kanasa.

The prisoner himself was in charge of Major Whes, the able Provest Marshal General of the department, efficiently assisted by Capt. Goodwin of the Thirty-seventh Indiana.

Capt. Doollitie and Lt. Kelly, of the Fourth regular ewalry, commanded the two companies of cavalry forming the except of General Rosecrass, but which, for this oversion, were the secont of Vallandigham. A second small wagon, with a trank and some other begigging, oldered the veitile containing the prisoner.

Such was the remarkable procession which at this silest hour passed along the streets of Murfreesborn', through the quiet and slumbering camps, and down the Shelbyville turnplike toward robelilous Dixie. Guard after guard, pinket after picket, scutlind after sentined was passed, the magic countersign opining stee in the walls of living men, which, circle ostimed circle, surrounded the town of Murfreesborn'. The men on guard steed benking in silent wonder at the unwouted spectacle, little thinking that they were gazing at the great. Copperhead that they were gazing at the great.

The subjoined extract from a private letter rritten by one of Grierson's officers, will be ound interesting:

We were 16 days in the heart of the enemy? country, swam 14 creeks and rivers, passed around the enemy's strongholds at Yleksburg and Fort Hudson, repulsed every force that was seen against us, and suffered but very triding loss.

Some of our adventures were quite animing Some of our adventures were quite amusing. Once we estore upon the samps of a large force that had been sent to cut us off, took the detachment that was left to guard it, helped our calves fo what we wanted, and burned the cest. Stratagem was often resorted to. From the prisoners taken, some of our men got uniforms for a disguise; these were employed in rariess ways. When pursued by a superior force, one of these time, dressed in the Confederate sufferen, rade to it and gave false information as to the direction his coursels had taken, and threw their off the seem. They do in advance of the main body, 'too, and paising thomselves off as Confederate cavairy, easily gained all the information they wanted about the roads, the read camps and force. They came to one small town, where there was a cavairy battailon forming, armed with double-barrel guns.

The alivance dressed in gray lackets, rode

They came to one small then, where there was a cavairy hatallon forming, armed with down ble-barrel guns.

The advance, dressed in gray jackets, rode in, said that some Confederate leader with his command had captured the Yankee force, and would supply them with cardines from those expured, if they would be collected to receive them; then riding back and joining their party, they made a charge in through the town, and took the whole force collected three prisoners paroling them, and breaking their guns against the pillars of the verandah of the principal hotel of the place. One of the trains was captured by means of a decay dressed in Receipgray, who calmed the fears of an engine drew his excellent, and made him prisoner who was somewhat suppleious, and was about to back his tratu away, mounted on the engine drew his extoleer, and made him prisoner. One camp was surrounded and expured in the same way, and our non enjoyed the breakfais which the flechs had been preparing for them selves.

The wounded—who were few—were brought along in carriages picked up by the way. When a lorse broke down the saddle way.

THE CANALLADE SHYS OUT.

It was, as I have said, 2 o'clock in the morning of the 25th instant, when Vallandigham stepped into the little spring-wayne which had brought him up from the depot, and started him, now began to loom up most distinctly before him. Not one of those who accompanied Mr. Vallandigham that night will ever forget it. Conversation by the Party.

Colonel McKibben, senior aid to the fearcrangements, ably assisted by Lieus. Colonel Ducat, Inspector General of the Department. Colonel McKibben had once sat in Congress with this same Vallandigham, and, although differing on many points, they had fought together against the iniquity of Buchanan's siministration. HEAT DAMAGE TO BERRY WAIL-HOARS IN MINSTERPPI AND HASTERN LOUISIANA, Car Pactory and a Shoe Factory Burned with All Their Contents.

The expedition of the First Tuxas cavalry, under Cel. Davis, along the line of the Jackson radioned through Eastern Luefains into Mississippi, was attended with much some lapportant results than appeared from the first reports. The cavalry, supported by infantry, left the Aintic river May 12, marched to Tiolday, La, lefasting a rebel force posted to apposite then pressed on to Ponichatouia, some fifteen miles morth, where they strack the Jackson Road, and continuing along this road, finally reached Camp Moore, some twenty miles south of Sumitt, Mississippi. At this placestse enemy, who had been driven in confusion at all points, itself their buildings and again retreated. A caisson and force, complete, were rolled into the burning building, where they were consumed. Colonel Davis, arriving shortly after, hurned a large depot building, together with a large and costly bridge over the Tangipahricer. In his march he had descroyed every within his reach. A large number of cars and one sine cupin were also destroyed, while the railroad station and all other robel property within his reach. A large number of cars and one sine cupin were also destroyed, while the railroad station up for a long distance.

These Chectaws were mentically under command of a Confederate Major, who dress pays at least for commanding the battallons, but it does not appear that be made much heads as in organizing the colasins—the highest much broads and firty, and must of these have been carred out of the country by Col. Grierson's famous exploits.

The conduct of our soldlers is described as unguisheaut throughout. At one point, apon approaching a bridge over a branch of the Tickfaw river, a relied was discovered concealed in the business on the other side. Four men were ordered to dismount and bring him out. As this order was executing, a force of reliefs, who were concealed on the opposite side of the stream, opened fre. Capit, Read, renominally, a detachment, immediately started for the bridge, which is a long, narrow size, and give the order to charge over the bridge. His men followed with great starefly, and the Capithad got nearly across, which he found that eight planks had been form up. With presence of mind, he cride out, "Helit wheel by troops, and retreat." This order was also obeyed with perfect precision, and his company once more food on fever firess. He then dismonuted his sample on the steamy of the free of the rebells was a Capit Leady. Their inovenients were so rapid that the robels sample end away in great haster. The officer is command of the rebells was a Capit Leater, of the Missishiph cavalry, who left he think in the interest.
